ABOUT ISC

The Indian Society of Criminology (ISC) is a professional and academic organisation dedicated to the advancement of criminology, criminal justice, and related disciplines in India. Established in 1970 at the Department of Criminology, University of Madras, the Society has, for over five decades, contributed to the development of criminological research, education, and practice in the country. The Society brings together academicians, researchers, practitioners, legal professionals, police and correctional personnel, psychologists, sociologists, and students from India and abroad who share an interest in crime and criminal justice.

The ISC organises the prestigious All India Criminology Conference (AICC) annually in collaboration with universities and institutions across the country, providing a national platform for examining contemporary issues relating to crime, policing, criminal justice, victimology, corrections, forensic science, cybercrime, terrorism, and emerging challenges in the field. The Society also conducts seminars, symposia, training programmes, lectures, and academic initiatives, including the Crime, Justice & Society Dialogues lecture series, to facilitate knowledge exchange and encourage meaningful engagement between scholars and practitioners.

The Society publishes the Indian Journal of Criminology (IJC), a peer-reviewed academic journal established in 1973, which provides a platform for scholarly research and critical discussions in criminology and allied fields. The ISC also recognises and encourages academic excellence through various awards, fellowships, and honours, while promoting opportunities for emerging scholars and young criminologists.

With a growing membership of over 2,200 members from India and abroad, the ISC continues to strengthen national and international academic collaborations and remains committed to advancing criminological knowledge, supporting evidence-based criminal justice policy and practice, and promoting the effective prevention and control of crime. Through its conferences, publications, research-oriented activities, and professional engagement, the Society seeks to ensure that contemporary developments in criminology meaningfully inform researchers, educators, practitioners, policymakers, legislators, and criminal justice institutions, ultimately contributing to a more informed, effective, and socially responsive criminal justice system.

TWO DAYS INTERNATIONAL CONFERENCE

ABOUT THE CONFERENCE

The increasing integration of science and technology including artificial intelligence (AI) and digital technologies is significantly reshaping criminal justice systems across the world. Their growing application and use in areas such as policing, investigation, adjudication has become central to contemporary administration and governance. The integration of technology enhances efficiency, improves investigative capabilities, strengthens evidence collection, facilitates judicial administration, and helps to address and combats enhanced forms of cyber and transnational crime.

While these technological developments increase efficiency, accuracy, and institutional effectiveness, they also raise serious concerns relating to privacy, human rights, fairness etc. These challenges call for a robust legal reform to govern the use of emerging technology in criminal justice systems.

Globally, policymakers and juridical institutions are attempting to develop appropriate regulatory frameworks that balance technological innovation with human rights, justice and values. Multiple International organisations have increasingly emphasized the need for responsible governance of emerging technologies in law enforcement and criminal justice systems. In India, recent legislative reforms, including the Bharatiya Nyaya Sanhita, Bharatiya Nagarik Suraksha Sanhita, Bharatiya Sakshya Adhiniyam of 2023 and the Digital Personal Data Protection Act, 2023, and evolving cybersecurity frameworks have further intensified scholarly discourse on technology-driven criminal justice reforms.

In this context, Xavier Law School, St. Xavier's University, Kolkata proposes to organise a Two-Days International Conference on "Emerging Technologies in Criminal Justice Administration: Challenges and Opportunities" on 14th and 15th January, 2027. The proposed conference aims to provide a platform to critically engage with the opportunities and challenges posed by these scientific developments, especially concerning fairness, privacy, accountability, human rights, and regulatory governance. It seeks to bring together scholars, practitioners, policymakers, civil society organisations and students and provide them an opportunity to have a dialogue and critically discuss emerging trends and future directions in criminal justice. The conference also aligns with the University's vision of promoting socially relevant legal scholarship, interdisciplinary research and meaningful engagement with contemporary global challenges.
